COOLIDGE IN COLUBADO,

Towns of the Buch-Vaunted Land of the West.

SOUTH ARKANSAS COL. June 12.—I left Colorado Springs on Wednesday last, via the Denver and R.o Grande railroad, for this point. We arrived at Pueblo at two o'clock i the afternoon, hot and dusty. It is the boss town for dust in Colorado. After leaving and traveing west some iwenty miles, we come to green fields and pastures strung along the Arkansas river for ten or fifteen miles. It is quite refreshing, after assurg with wearied even none parched hills dancing in the burning sunlight, to see again nature in her natural and accustomed robe. The fields are all irrigated with water from the Arkunsas river, and the soil seems to respond quite liberally under the treatment. I saw considerable corn three and four inches high, which is very encouraging here, where it is only twelve or litteen inches in hight when it matures.

Way than any other single corporation in the world, and is by far the leading company in the nightly northwest. It runs Four daily trains Chicago to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Madison, Waukesha, Occoomovoc, Nashotan, Hartland and Pewaukee.

Two daily trains to Sparta, Kilbourn City, Beaver Dam, Ripon (for Green Lake) Pale and one stack in twenty has an ear of corn fully as long as a knife handle. I am very careful not to exaggerate the size of the ears, west, worth visiting, can be as I know it has been very common for writers to overdraw everything in Colorado. After refreshing our eyes on this acceptable greenness for about fifteen minutes, we come to Canon City, a quiet little town with a good share of its population in the penitentiary, the State saylum for those "who do not scorn the seat of wicked men." It is a beauiful building of light colored store, and presents a very attractive appearance to those on the outside. To the occupants the most attractive feature was probably the guards who paced the walls with well-loaded mus-kets. A great many of the convicts were quarrying rock. I felt convinced that I was "" in the land of culture and progress when I saw so many men

o ling stripes for their country's good, The engine's shrick is echoed from the mountains, and we are off again and rapidly near-ing the Grand canon of the Arkansas. Here Nature has battled with her God, and thrown up buge rocky ramparts in defiance of wind and storm. Swiftly we glide into the dark jaws of the huge canon, a wild and foaming river at our side, and a thousand feet above straight as a plumb-line, a lifeless wall o rock that im gination can call the bound-ary of another world. The railroad fol-lows the windings of the river for many miles and every turn of the car-whee's change the panoramic views. In a narrow gorge, where the mad river disputed the way, so ence triumped over nature and threw across the chasm huge ribs of sheel, along which the iron borse drags its freight while the torrent roars and foams in vain below. Soon the mountains lessen, the river grows broader and calmer, the sun is warmer and brighter, and in the blue and hazy Sangre de Christo glitters in the sunlight Speeding along we pass trees and rocks, hills and mountains, casons and plains, until our eyesight becomes confused. Cleora is the first station after coming out of the Grand canon. It is a poor little town which is being torn down and dug up preparatary to moving to ing point while being the termius of the Rio Grande railroad. Now that the road has advanced it is a dead herring on the string. Five miles beyond is the great town of South Arkansas. I arrived at seven o'clock in the evening. The depot is in a box-car—the ticket office in one end and the telegraph office in the o.posite. The freight is all stored out of doors. Across the Arkansas river is the town two weeks old, containing two banks, two keno tents, ten saloons under duck cover, eight or ten stores, two livery stables, and about thirty or forty bouses and tents besides. The town is laid off in good wide streets, and lot owners are asking from two to four hundred dollars each for lots. About five miles south is the celebrated hot spring, which is well patron z-d the year, quite refreshing to look at during July and August. I had the good ferture to become acquainted with a furniture dealer (who had opened business and had already sold two chairs at one dollar and a quarter each) who took me in and gave me an Excesor mattress to lodge on The night was cold and five blackets did I get under, before I arrived at a comfortable point. The wind was on a go during the night, and the root being figure (made entirely of cotton duck) I thought several times it would take the more several times at the more several times at the several times at the more several times at the several times a by rheumatics. The site is entirely sur-rounded by high mountains. On the west morning and fly to the uttermost part of the earth. So much did this thought occupy my mind this thought occupy my mind that I reached and got a stout chair and placed over my head, so that in case the building should collaps and the rafters fall, my head would be intact, if it brused the slance of my body to a jelly. With this providential chair over my frightened cranium, I dropped to sleep. The morning was calm and beautiful, the distant mountains stood in bold relief against a couliess sky, and the

own shone in all its rough-plank glory. Ten o'clork came, and with it a zephyr of wind, which s ion grew to the proportions of a hurriane. Tents began to flop, and men drove their bats far down on their heads and tucked their ears under so they wouldn't blow off, and then the plank and gravel began to fly. One man cooking on a camp-stove had to weight it down with a good six d stone to keep from losing it, and finally had to give it up, for the wind got his tent down, and when he unloaded his stove it started on a journey and would have gone to Leadville if he had not was troubled with bowleggedness, and it was painful to see him ruu in front of the hat Are celebrated for their pureness and fine and try to stop its mad career. With his flavors. Those leaving the city, as well as moonshaped extremities in position, the hat should supply themselves with would run through laughing. He ran about three quarters of a mile and only captured the hat by falling down on it. While eating my dinner a sand-storm came up, and the house being built of rough plank, the sand sitted through as from a huge pepper box until the food was completely hidden from sight almost. South Arkansas is a nice place, a great deal of freighting is done here and a good deal of blowing.

J.A. COOLIDGE. A Marriage Homance. Mr. Anson G. Poelps Dodge, jr., and Miss Ada P. Dodge, grandchildren of Mr. W. E. Dodge, sr., of New York, were married in London on Monday. These young people eloped in September, 1878, the youth being seventeen years of age and the miss sixteen.

but were overtaken at the Ebbitt house, in Washington City, after a marriage license had been procured, and returned to their parents. Within the past year the father of the bride, Rev. D. Stuart Dodge, has been visiting Syria upon missionary business, and consin met her abroad, with the full appro-bation of the families, and the marriage was allowed to take place in London.

United States happened to find himself passing through a little town in Georgia, to which he had left instructions that his letters should be addressed. The stranger repaired to the humble postoffice, situated in a wooden building, through the flimsy roof of which the vertical sun of the south beat with almost uninterrupted intensity, and, men-tioning his name, asked through the narrow wicket whether any letters awaited him. In the interior of the little office was seated a grave, elderly man, with a long white beard, and with a paralyzed or, at any rate, help-less right arm hanging feebly by his side. His face, air and manner seemed to betoken that he had known better times and had been familiar with the experiences of a stormy life. As General Longstreet, for he was the postmaster referred to, rose from his seat and thrust his left hand into a pigeon hole to search for the letters inquired after by his visitor, it flushed through the mind of the Englishman that he had seen a photograph of the remarkable man in whose presence he found himself. A few sympathetic questions drew from General Long-street the avowal that he had, nearly twenty years ago, been a commander of a division in the army of General Robert E. Lee. The diplomatic appointment is warmly commend ed, and the belief is expressed that upon questions of war or as to the organization ourmies, it would not be easy for the sultar to find a more practical, experienced and sagacious adviser than Mr. James Long-

Louise, princess of England and marchion of Lorne, is quoted as saying to a reporter of the Milwaukee Sentinel that she and her brother were very much entertained and delighted by the Chicago convention. "We were glast of an opportunity," she said, "to see the primary gathering of gentlemen who select your ruler. I can hardly describe in a few words the feelings I experienced. To think that fight there in Coicago business was going on as usual, no undue excitement (?), and that in the large building a few men [searly eight hundred] (for they are but a few of your vast population) were having a debating society that was making your ruler.

You know it is so different from what we have been accustomed to," exclaimed the lady, speaking in an interested and vivacious manner. "My sensations," she added, "were conflicting, and I have thought much and will think long upon what I saw. This fe-public is certainly a remarkable institution. No man has any right to the throne or the chair. It is open to everybody. And yet I am told that all the feeling subsides and ev-ery member of the party works to elect the
